But He Did!

The last issue of the Uvalde Leader-News contains the following articles of surrender:

"We give up the reformation of the Hondo Anvil Herald and its editor, Fletcher Davis, as a bad job. We objected to the language used by it and him in an editorial some time since in which he classed prohibitionists generally as demagogues, and the fascists keep on reprinting the cause of our complaint every issue in answer to our argument that they are out of order. We don't think Davis is so proud of his editorial but he is afflicted with the spring fever and is too lazy to set anything fresh. We won't give him an excuse to 'make phat' on that article again and shall close our part of the illuminating discussion by declaring that 'he's another.' Besides we've whipped him anyhow, and shall retire with our glory."

The Leader-News man is such a game sport that we are prone to allow him to retire with the honors of war. But the statement that we "classed prohibitionists generally as demagogues" is so palpably erroneous and unjust that we shall ask him to read again:

THE demagogue who would revive the rancors and the passions of last summer's prohibition fight that he may, camp-follower-like, fatten on the spoils of the political warfare is no patriot but is rather a menace to the welfare of the state. He should be buried so deep beneath an avalanche of ballots as to be forever relegated to political oblivion!

We protest that such a classification is neither made, implied or intended. And the Leader-News' cock-sure assertion that we "classed prohibitionists generally as demagogues" is in marked contrast to its first comment on the same language when it said "you may be right, but we CAN'T TELL whom you are roasting!"

The wildest stretch of inference could make the language go no further than to imply that prohibitionists generally are FOLLOWING a demagogue. And even that is not there. For, while we are free to confess we are not overly sanguine of it, we hope "prohibitionists generally" will not only not follow him but will assist in the burial by ballots!

In fact, we are the most hopeful person in the world! We even hope that the Leader-News, man rather than put a sixteen inch gun into his boot-leg and go out to shoot "proud American spirit" into his anti neighbor until the said anti is "licked to death," will permit him to enjoy his own "spirits" in his own way!

A Friendly Boost.

With a reasonable assurance of a good cotton crop in Southwest Texas this year, the Hondo Anvil Herald urges that a cotton seed oil mill and a compress be erected in Hondo. The cotton production in this part of the State is increasing from year to year, so is the consumption of products and byproducts of cottonseed, and it would seem a very practical proposition to establish enterprises at convenient points to handle the crops. The country about Hondo is rich and the farmers make fine cotton crops. West of there is a long stretch of territory which is fast coming into cultivation, and it will supply a large quantity of cotton to be pressed and seed to be made into oil, cake, soap, "olive oil" and several other useful articles.—San Antonio Express.

Organize A County Fair.

To all who think seriously the advantages of the country fair must be apparent. The local pride it stimulates in better crops, purebred stock, fancy work and products from the kitchen is far-reaching and it generally bears fruit in larger crops and better farming.

Every county in the Southwest should have a fair. The county fair will supplement the district and the state fairs and enable your county to make a better showing at these fairs.

The county fair is no money-making investment for those who begin it. Its value cannot be estimated in money, but those who take stock should do so for the benefit of the county and the farming interest and not with a view of getting dividends on their investment. The county fair is the best means of advancing such educational organizations as corn clubs, hog clubs, canning clubs, gardening clubs, etc. Business men who assist the fair have the satisfaction of rendering assistance to agriculture, which is the source of this country's wealth.

It is none too early to begin an organization for the county fair. The organization should be made early and subscriptions taken to insure the success of the fair. The premiums should be liberal enough to cause keen competition and make it worth while to exhibit the products of the county.

The county fair is a great factor for education, as from it young people may get inspiration for better things in agriculture. It teaches the possibilities of our farms, encourages handicraft and increases the pride of living in the country. There is no better advertisement for a community than the county fair; it is an investment that will bring returns in better farming and better home life.—Farm and Ranch.

It Pays To Advertise.

Fletcher Davis of the Hondo Anvil Herald is preparing to go with us to the next Southwest Texas Press and Commercial Association at Fort Stockton. Anticipating a long and rocky walk he inserted an advertisement last week for a pair of old shoes on trade for subscription—Uvalde Leader-News.

Our pair goes by express today. Warm weather has set in and we have no further use for them.—Eagle Pass News-Guide.

Aint That The Truth?

Joe Boehmer threw his hat in the ring and read the riot act to the Eagle Pass saloon men. Joe can drink Rio Grande water if he gets mad enough.—Del Rio Herald. But Joe is such a jolly good fellow that it would take nothing short of a terrible drought to make him that mad.—Hondo Davis.

I learned long ago that every time I got mad it hurt me worse than it did the other fellow.—Eagle Pass News-Guide.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's catarrh cure. Send for circulars free. F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O.

Sold by Druggists, 75c. Take Hall's Family pills for constipation.

Are You Nervous?

What makes you nervous? It is the weakness of your womanly constitution, which cannot stand the strain of the hard work you do. As a result, you break down, and ruin your entire nervous system. Don't keep this up! Take Cardui, the woman's tonic. Cardui is made from purely vegetable ingredients. It acts gently on the womanly organs, and helps them to do their proper work. It relieves pain and restores health, in a natural manner, by going to the source of the trouble and building up the bodily strength.

TAKE The CARDUI Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Grace Fortner, of Man, W. Va., took Cardui. This is what she says about it: "I was so weak and nervous, I could not bear to have anyone near me. I had fainting spells, and I lost flesh every day. The first dose of Cardui helped me. Now, I am entirely cured of the fainting spells, and I cannot say enough for Cardui, for I know it saved my life." It is the best tonic for women. Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to women? Take Cardui. It will help you. Ask your druggist.

What Ails You?

Do you feel weak, tired, despondent, have frequent headaches, coated tongue, bitter or bad taste in morning, "heart-burn," belching of gas, acid risings in throat after eating, stomach gnaw or burn, foul breath, dizzy spells, poor or variable appetite, nausea at times and kindred symptoms?

If you have any considerable number of the above symptoms you are suffering from biliousness, torpid liver with indigestion, or dyspepsia. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is made up of the most valuable medicinal principles known to medical science for the permanent cure of such abnormal conditions. It is a most efficient liver invigorator, stomach tonic, bowel regulator and nerve strengthener.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" is not a patent medicine or secret nostrum, a full list of its ingredients being printed on its bottle-wrapper and attested under oath. A glance at these will show that it contains no alcohol, or harmful habit-forming drugs. It is a fluid extract made with pure, triple-refined glycerine, of proper strength, from the roots of native American medicinal forest plants. New Towns to be Built.

As a result of the visit to San Antonio of Dr. F. S. Pearson, promoter and financier of the Medina river irrigation project, announcement was made this morning by C. F. Kearney, chief engineer of the Medina Valley Irrigation company, that arrangements had been completed with the International & Great Northern and the Southern Pacific railroads for the establishment of a new town along each of these roads on the lands of the Medina company and that sale and colonization of the first 12,000 acres of irrigated lands would commence immediately.

The two railroads run parallel through the Medina lands—one on each side—and it is there the new towns will be established. Natalia, named in honor of Dr. Pearson's daughter, Natalia, will be built midway between Devine and Lytle on the International & Great Northern. The townsite includes a square mile of territory and will be developed at once. The new town on the Southern Pacific has not yet been named, but will be situated on the other side of Lacoste.

With the establishment of these two new towns there will be four towns along the International & Great Northern on the Medina lands and three along the Southern Pacific. Along the former are Devine, Natalia, Lytle and Kirk and along the latter the new town, Lacoste and Macdona. This arrangement will put all lands within easy distance of shipping facilities.

The tract that Dr. Pearson has decided to first open includes 12,000 acres and is situated between the new town on the Southern Pacific, Lacoste, Natalia and Lytle. It has been cleared of brush and the canal laterals now are being run through it.

Dr. Pearson, H. I. Miller and party, left last night for the north via the Missouri, Kansas & Texas railroad.

Yesterday they visited lands of the company and decided on location of townsites and plans for colonization. —Saturday's San Antonio Light.

Mrs. Lela Love, wife of Wiley Love, a farmer living near Covena, Ga., says: "I have taken Foley's Kidney Pills and find them to be all you claim for them. They gave me almost instant relief when my kidneys were sluggish and inactive. I cheerfully recommend them to all sufferers from kidney troubles." Foley Kidney Pills are as carefully made and as scientifically compounded as any medicine your home doctor can give you. They act directly on the kidneys and bladder. W. H. Windrow.

As an expert in the art of bobbing for bullheads we insist that there is no bait quite equal to the common or garden variety of fishworm. But we are not quite so enthusiastic in our quest of the aforesaid fishworm as we used to be. It's so much easier to buy a nickle's worth of liver.

HERBINE
For the Bowels

A Cure for Chronic Constipation, Torpid Liver and Irregular Bowel Movements.

Constipation is the most common disorder of the bowels. It affects both sexes and all ages but is more prevalent among women because their duties in the household require less physical exercise than the occupations of men; therefore women suffer most from its baneful effect.

A constipated person is an easy victim when exposed to any serious disease—Pneumonia, Typhoid Fever, Malaria, Rheumatism, Small Pox, Yellow Fever and Bright's Disease gather their annual harvest of death among those who are habitually constipated. Even though they escape these diseases, such persons are always ailing more or less. They have headaches, bad digestion, dizziness, vertigo (blind staggers), sallow complexion, flatulence, loss of strength; and no energy at all. Herbine has a most admirable effect in the bowels; it is cooling, purifying and regulating. It puts a prompt check on biliousness, wind in the bowels, nervousness, heartburn, bad breath, low spirits, drowsiness in the daytime and nervous wakefulness at night.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Edith Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland, James Armstrong, Maitland's protégé, falls in love with her.

CHAPTER II.—His persistent wooing irritates the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer.

CHAPTER III.—Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help.

CHAPTER IV.—Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them.

CHAPTER V.—While Enid is bathing in the river in fancied solitude, a big bear appears on the bank and is about to plunge into the water to attack the girl when a shot rings out and the animal is killed by a strange man.

CHAPTER VI.—Enid is caught in a storm which wipes out her party's camp. She is dashed upon the rocks and injured. The strange man who shot the bear finds her unconscious and carries her to shelter.

CHAPTER VII.—Members of the camping party realizing that Enid is lost in the storm institute a frantic search for the missing girl.

CHAPTER VIII.—No trace of her is found and word is telegraphed to her father. James Armstrong is asking the father for Enid's hand when the telegram arrives, expressing the belief that the girl is dead. Armstrong says he will find her, and Maitland agrees to their marriage if he succeeds.

CHAPTER IX.—Enid regains consciousness in the hut of the man who had rescued her. He tells her that he has been severely injured.

CHAPTER X.—The girl spends a fairly comfortable night, but her host in the next room a restless one as he lives over days that are gone. He has some secret in his life.

CHAPTER XI.—Morning finds Enid refreshed and ready for the substantial breakfast the man has prepared for her.

CHAPTER XII.—Her rescuer goes in search of Enid's party, but returns at daylight alone and unsuccessful. In his absence she discovers books which show him to be a man of education.

CHAPTER XIII.—Enid finds that she must remain in the mountains until her foot is better and the mountain trails passable, or permit her companion to leave her alone for a week while he goes in search of help. She decides to have him remain with her.

CHAPTER XIV.—A whole month passes before Enid's foot is thoroughly well and in the meantime she discovers that she is in love with the strange silent man who intrudes himself as little as possible on her notice.

CHAPTER XV.—The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained.

CHAPTER XVI.—The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her memory by living in solitude. He and Enid, however, confess their love for each other. She learns that he is the man who killed his wife in the mountain.

CHAPTER XVII.—Enid discovers the writer of the letters to Newbold a wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbold decides to start to the settlement for help.

CHAPTER XVIII.—The man is racked by the belief that he is unfaithful to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession.

CHAPTER XX.

The Converging Trails.

Whatever the feeling of the others, Armstrong found himself unable to sleep that night. It seemed to him that fate was about to play him the meanest and most fantastic of tricks. Many times before in his crowded life he had loved other women, or so he characterized his feelings, but his passion for Louise Rosser Newbold had been in a class by itself until he had met Enid Maitland. Between the two there had been many women, but these two were the high points, the rest was lowland.

Once before, therefore, this Newbold had cut in ahead of him and had won the woman he loved. Armstrong had cherished a hard grudge against him for a long time. He had not been of those who had formed the rescue party led by old Kirkby and Maitland which had buried the poor woman on the great butte in the deep canon. Before he got back to the camp the whole affair was over and Newbold had departed. Luckily for him, Armstrong had always thought, for he had been so mad with grief and rage and jealousy that if he had come across him, helpless or not, he would have killed him out of hand.

Armstrong had soon enough forgotten Louise Rosser, but he had not forgotten Newbold. All his ancient animosity had flamed into instant life again, at the sight of his name last night. The inventory of his hatred had been in no way abated by the lapse of time, it seemed.

Everybody in the mining camp had supposed that Newbold had wandered off and perished in the mountains, else Armstrong might have pursued him and hunted him down. The sight of his name on that piece of paper was outward and visible evidence that he still lived. It had almost the shock of a resurrection, and a resurrection to hatred rather than to love. If

Wonderful Praise Accorded Peruna the Household Remedy

Mrs. Maria Goertiz, Orienta, Oklahoma, writes:

"My husband, children and myself have used your medicines, and we always keep them in the house in case of necessity. I was restored to health by this medicine, and Dr. Hartman's invaluable advice and books. People ask about me from different places, and are surprised that I can do all of my household alone, and that I was cured by the doctor of chronic catarrh. My husband was cured of asthma, my daughter of catarrh and catarrh of the stomach, and my son of catarrh of the throat. When I was sick I weighed 100 pounds; now I weigh 140.

"I have regained my health again, and I cannot thank you enough for your advice. May God give you a long life and bless your work."

Newbold had been alone in the world, if Armstrong had chanced upon him in the solitude, he would have hated him just as he did, but when he thought that his ancient enemy was with the woman he now loved, with a growing intensity beside which his former resentment seemed weak and feeble he hated him yet the more.

He could not tell when the notice, which he had examined carefully, was written; there was no date upon it, but he could come to only one conclusion. Newbold must have found Enid Maitland alone in the mountains very shortly after her departure, and he had her with him in his cabin alone for at least a month. Armstrong grieved his teeth at the thought. He did not undervalue the personality of Newbold. He had never happened to see him, but he had heard enough about him to understand his qualities as a man. The tie that bound Armstrong to Enid Maitland was a strong one, but the tie by which he held her to him, if indeed he held her at all, was very tenuous and easily broken; perhaps it was broken already, and so he hated him still more and more.

Indeed, his animosity was so great and growing that for the moment he took no joy in the assurance of the girl's safety; yet he was not altogether an unfair man, and in calmer moments he thanked God in his own rough way that the woman he loved was alive and well, or had been when the note was written. He rejoiced that she had not been swept away with the flood or that she had not been lost in the mountains and forced to wander on finally to starve and freeze and die. In one moment her nearness caused his heart to throb with joyful anticipation. The certainty that at the first flush of day he should seek her again sent the warm blood to his cheeks. But those thoughts would be succeeded by the knowledge that she was with his enemy. Was this man to rob him of the latest love as he had robbed him of the first? Perhaps the hardest task that was ever laid upon Armstrong was to lie quietly in his sleeping bag and wait until the morning.

So soon as the first indication of dawn showed over the crack of the door, he slipped quietly out of his sleeping bag and without disturbing the others drew on his boots, put on his heavy fur coat and cap and gloves, slung his Winchester and his snow shoes over his shoulder, and without stopping for a bite to eat, softly opened the door, stepped out and closed it after him. It was quite dark in the bottom of the canon, although a few pale gleams overhead indicated the near approach of day. It was quite still, too. There were clouds on the mountain top heavy with threat of wind and snow.

The way was not difficult, the direction of it, that is, Nor was the going very difficult at first; the snow was frozen and the crust was strong enough to bear him. He did not need his snow shoes, and, indeed, would have had little chance to use them in the narrow, broken, rocky pass. He had slipped away from the others because he wanted to be first to see the man and the woman. He did not want any witnesses to that meeting. They would have come on later, of course; but he wanted an hour or two in private with Enid and Newbold without any interruption. His conscience was not clear. Nor could he settle upon a course of action.

How much Newbold knew of his former attempt to win away his wife, how much of what he knew he had told Enid Maitland, Armstrong could not surmise. Putting himself into Newbold's place and imagining that the engineer had possessed entire information, he decided that he must have told everything to Enid Maitland as soon as he had found out the quasi relation between her and Armstrong. And Armstrong did not believe the woman he loved could be in anybody's presence a month without telling something about him. Still, it was possible that Newbold knew nothing, and that he told nothing therefore.

The situation was paralyzing to a man of Armstrong's decided, determined temperament. He could not decide upon the line of conduct he should pursue. His course in this, the most critical emergency he had ever faced, must be determined by circumstances of which he felt with savage resentment he was in some measure the sport. He would have to leave to chance what ought to be subject to his will. Of only one thing he was sure—he would stop at nothing, murder, lying, nothing, to win the woman, and to settle his score with that man.

There was really only one thing he could do, and that was to press on up the canon. He had no idea how far it might be or how long a journey he would have to make before he reached that shelf on the high hill where stood that hut in which she dwelt. As the crow flies, it could not be a great distance, but the canon zigzagged through the mountains with as many curves and angles as a lightning flash. He plodded on, therefore, with furious haste, recklessly speeding over places where a misstep in the snow or a slip on the icy rocks would have meant death or disaster to him.

He had gone about an hour, and had perhaps made four miles from the camp when the storm burst upon him. It was now broad day, but the sky was filled with clouds and the air with driving snow. The wind whistled down the canon with terrific force. It was with difficulty that he made any headway at all against it. It was a local storm; if he could have looked through the snow he would have discovered calmness on the top of the peaks. It was one of those sudden squalls of wind and snow which rage with terrific force while they last, but whose rage was limited, and whose violent duration would be short.

A less determined man than he would have bowed to the inevitable and sought some shelter behind a rock until the fury of the tempest was spent, but there was no storm that blew that could stop this man so long as he had strength to drive against it. So he bent his head to the fierce blast and struggled on. There was something titanic and magnificent about this iron determination and persistence of Armstrong. The two most powerful passions which move humanity were at his service; love led him and hate drove him. And the two were so intermingled that it was difficult to say which predominated, now one and now the other. The resultant of the two forces, however, was an onward move that would not be denied.

His fur coat was soon covered with snow and ice, the sharp needles of the storm cut his face wherever it was exposed. The wind forced its way through his garments and chilled him to the bone. He had eaten nothing since the night before, and his vitality was not at its food, but he pressed on, and there was something grand in his indomitable progress. Excelsior!

Back in the hut Kirkby and Maitland sat around the fire waiting most impatiently for the wind to blow itself out and for that snow to stop falling through which Armstrong struggled forward. As he followed the windings of the canon, not daring to ascend to the summit on either wall and seek short cuts across the range, he was sensible that he was constantly rising. There were many indications to his experienced mind; the decrease in the height of the surrounding pines, the increasing rarity of the icy air, the growing difficulty in breathing under the sustained exertion he was making, the quick throbbing of his accelerated heart, all told him he was approaching his journey's end.

He judged that he must now be drawing near the source of the stream, and that he would presently come upon the shelter. He had no means of ascertaining the time. He would not have dared to unbutton his coat to glance at his watch, and it is difficult to measure the flying minutes in such scenes as those through which he passed, but he thought he must have gone at least seven miles in perhaps three hours, which he fancied had elapsed, his progress in the last two having been frightfully slow. Every foot of advance he had had to fight for.

Suddenly a quick turn in the canon, a passage through a narrow entrance between lofty cliffs, and he found himself in a pocket or a circular amphitheater which he could see was closed on the farther side. The bottom of this enclosure or valley was covered with pines, now drooping under tremendous burdens of snow. In the midst of the pines a lakelet was frozen solid; the ice was covered with the same dazzling carpet of white.

He could have seen nothing of this had not the sudden storm now stopped as precipitately almost as it had begun. Indeed, accustomed to the grayness of the snow fall, his eyes were fairly dazzled by the bright light of the sun, now quite high over the range, which struck him full in the face.

He stopped, panting, exhausted, and leaned against the rocky wall of the canon's mouth which here rose sheer over his head. This certainly was the end of the trail, the lake was the source of the frozen rivulet along whose rocky and torn banks he had tramped since dawn. Here, if anywhere, he would find the object of his quest.

Refreshed by a brief pause, and encouraged by the sudden stilling of the storm, he stepped out of the canon and ascended a little knoll whence he had a full view of the pocket over the tops of the pines. Shading his eyes from the light with his hand as best he could, he slowly swept the circumference with his eager glance, seeing nothing until his eye fell upon a huge broken trail of rocks projecting from the snow, indicating the ascent to a broad shelf of the mountains across the lake to the right. Following this he saw a huge block of snow which suggested dimly the outlines of a hut!

Was that the place? Was she there? He stared fascinated and as he did so a thin curl of smoke rose above the snow heap and hovered up in the cold, quiet air! That was a human habitation, then. It could be none other than the hut referred to in the note. Enid Maitland must be there; and Newbold!

The lake lay directly in front of him beyond the trees at the foot of the knoll, and between him and the slope that led up to the hut. If it had been summer, he would have been compelled to follow the water's edge to the right or to the left; both journeys would have led over difficult trails, with little to choose between them, but the lake was now frozen hard and covered with snow. He had no doubt that the snow would bear him, but to make sure he drew his snow shoes from his shoulder, slipped his feet in the straps, and sped straight on through the trees and across it like an arrow from a bow.

In five minutes he was at the foot of the giant stairs. Kicking off his snow shoes, he scrambled up the broken way, easily finding in the snow a trail which had evidently been passed and repassed daily. In a few moments he was at the top of the shelf. A hard trampled path ran between high walls of snow to a door!

Behind that door what would he find? Just what he brought to it, love and hate, he fancied. We usually find on the other side of doors no more and no less than we bring to our own sides. But whatever was there there was no hesitation in Armstrong's course. He ran toward it, laid his hand on the latch, and opened it.

What creatures of habit we are! Early in that same morning, after one vain attempt again to influence the woman who was now the deciding and determining factor, and who seemed to be taking the man's place, Newbold, ready for his journey, had torn himself away from her presence and had plunged down the giant stair. He had done everything that mortal man could do for her comfort; wood enough to last her for two weeks had been taken from the cave and piled in the kitchen and everywhere so as to be easily accessible to her; the stores she already had the run of, and he had fitted a stout bar to the outer door which would render it impregnable to any attack that might be made against it, although he saw no quarter from which any assault impended.

Enid had recovered not only her strength, but a good deal of her nerve. That she loved this man and that he loved her had given her courage. She would be fearfully lonely, of course, but not so much afraid as before. The month of immunity in the mountains without any interruptions had dissipated any possible apprehensions on her part. It was with a sinking heart, however, that she saw him go at last.

They had been so much together in that month; they had learned what love was. When he came back it would be different, he would not come alone. The first human being he met would bring the world to the door of the lonely but beloved cabin in the mountains—the world with its questions, its inference, its suspicions, its denunciations and its accusations! Some kind of an explanation would have to be made, some sort of an answer would have to be given, some solution of the problem would have to be arrived at. What these would be she could not tell.

Newbold's departure was like the end of an era to her. The curtain dropped; when it rose again what was to be expected? There was no comfort except in the thought that she loved him. So long as their affections matched and ran together nothing else mattered. With the solution of it all next to her sadly beating heart she was still supremely confident that love, or God—and there was not so much difference between them as to make it worth while to mention the one rather than the other—would find the way.

Their leave taking had been singularly cold and abrupt. She had realized the danger he was apt to incur and she had exacted a reluctant promise from him that he would be careful. "Don't throw your life away, don't risk it even, remember that it is mine," she had urged.

And just as simply as she had enjoined it upon him he had promised. He had given his word that he would send help back to her but that he would bring it back, and she had confidence in that word. A confidence that had been inclined to break his promise would have made it absolutely impossible. There had been a long clasp of the hands, a long look in the eyes, a long breath in the breast, a long throb in the heart and then—farewell. They parted no more.

Once before he had left her and she had stood upon the plateau and followed his vanishing figure with anxious troubled thought until it had been lost in the depths of the forest below. She had controlled herself in this second parting for his sake as well as her own. Under the ashes of his grim repression she realized the presence of live coals which a breath would have fanned into flame. She dared nothing while he was there, but when he shut the door behind him the necessity for self-control was removed. She had laid her arms on the table and bowed her head upon them and shook and quivered with emotions unrelieved by a single tear—weeping for lighter hearts and less severe demands!

His position after all was the easier of the two. As of old it was the man who went forth to the battlefield while the woman could only wait passively the issue of the fight. Although he was half blinded with emotions he had to give some thought to his progress, and there was yet one task to be done before he could set forth upon his journey toward civilization and rescue.

It was fortunate, as it turned out, that this obligation detained him. He was that type of a merciful man whose mercies extended to his beasts. The poor little burros must be attended to and their safety assured so far as it could be, for it would be impossible for Enid Maitland to care for them. Indeed he had already exacted a promise from her that she would not leave the plateau and risk her life on the icy stairs with which she was so unfamiliar.

He had gone to the corral and shaken down food enough for them which if it had been doled out to them day by day would have lasted longer than the week he intended to be absent; of course he realized that they would eat it up in half that time, but even so they would probably suffer not too great discomfort before he got back.

All these preparations took some little time. It had grown somewhat late in the morning before he started. There had been a fierce storm raging when he first looked out and at her earnest solicitation he had delayed his departure until it had subsided.

His tasks at the corral were at last completed; he had done what he could for them both, nothing now remained but to make the quickest and safest way to the settlement. Shouldering the pack containing his axe and gun and sleeping bag and such provision as would serve to tide him over until he reached human habitations, he set forth. He did not look up to the hut, indeed he could not have seen it for the corral was almost directly beneath it, but if it had been in full view he would not have looked back, he could not trust himself to, every instinct, every impulse in his soul would have dragged him back to that hut and to the woman. It was only his will and did he but know it, her will that made him carry out his purpose.

He would have saved perhaps half a mile on his journey if he had gone straight across the lake to the mouth of the canon. We are creatures of habit. He had always gone around the lake on the familiar trail and unconsciously he followed that trail that morning. He was thinking of her as he plodded on in a mechanical way while the trail followed the border of the lake for a time, plunged into the woods, wound among the pines, at least reaching that narrow rift in the encircling wall through which the river flowed. He had passed along the trail oblivious to all his surroundings, but as he came to the entrance he could not fail to notice what he suddenly saw in the snow.

Robinson Crusoe when he discovered the famous footprint of Man Friday.

"You!" She Exclaimed, Almost in Terror.

day in the sand was not more astonished at what met his vision than Newbold on that winter morning. For there, in the virgin whiteness, were the tracks of a man!

He stopped dead with a sudden contraction of the heart. Humanity other than he and she in that wilderness? It could not be! For a moment he doubted the evidence of his own senses. He shook his pack loose from his shoulders and bent down to examine the tracks to read if he could their indications. He could see that some one had come up the canon, that some one had leaned against the wall, that some one had gone on. Where had he gone?

To follow the new trail was child's play for him. He ran by the side of it until he reached the knoll. The stranger had stopped again, he had shifted from one foot to another, evidently he had been looking about him seeking some one, only Enid Maitland of course. The trail ran forward to the edge of the frozen lake, there the man had put on his snow shoes, there he had sped across the lake like an arrow, and like an arrow himself although he had left behind his own snow shoes, Newbold ran upon his track. Fortunately the snow crust upon the lake was not so hard as the snow on the foot of the rocky stairs. The newcomer had easily found his way there.

With beating heart and throbbing pulse, Newbold himself bounded up the acclivity after the stranger, marking as he did so evidences of the other's prior ascent. Reaching the top like him he ran down the narrow path and in his turn laid his hand upon the door.

He was not mistaken, he heard voices within. He listened a second and then swung it open, and as the other had done, he entered.

Way back on the trail, old Kirkby and Robert Maitland, the storm having ceased, were rapidly climbing up the canon. Fate was bringing all the actors of the little drama within the shadow of her hand.

OHIO DEMOCRACY PLEDGES FEALTY TO HARMON'S CAUSE

Unanimous Endorsement Given by State Convention and Tom L. Johnson Organization.

No man mentioned for the Democratic nomination for president has received any better endorsements from his native state than has Governor Judson Harmon of Ohio. These endorsements represent the sentiment of the entire state regarding Harmon's candidacy.

The Ohio Democracy launched a presidential boom for Governor Harmon when the delegates to the state Democratic convention in Dayton, June 21, 1910, unanimously endorsed him for president. A resolution adopted by that convention reads:

"We invite the attention of the nation to Judson Harmon and the work he is doing for Ohio. Two years hence it will have been completed. Then we can spare him for larger duties. He believes that 'guilt is personal'—is acting on that belief at home and would act upon it in larger fields. A high sense of duty provides his only motives for official actions, and his sense of justice alone compels judgment. Firmness and strength mark him a man to supplant vacillation and weakness. The nation needs a real man and the Ohio Democracy here presents and indorses for the presidency in 1912 Judson Harmon."

It was feared that the above endorsement would inject national issues in the state campaign and would drive away independent Republicans who approved of the Harmon administration in Ohio.

President Taft sent ex-President Roosevelt and five members of his cabinet into the state to fight Governor Harmon in the 1910 campaign, but the people repudiated these efforts to encompass Harmon's defeat and gave him a plurality of 101,000.

The Cuyahoga county Democracy, which was ruled by Tom L. Johnson during his life, on March 2, 1911, shortly before Mr. Johnson's death, indorsed Governor Harmon for president and passed the following resolution:

"The Democratic organization of Cuyahoga county believes that the superb vote of confidence given to Governor Harmon by the people of this state and this county makes him Ohio's favorite son as a candidate for the presidency of the United States, and we hereby pledge him our cordial support."

"Governor Harmon's well known views upon the tariff and other national questions commend his candidacy to a people who have long suffered under a system of favoritism and extortion at the hands of privileged interests. His brave insistence upon the carrying out of distinct pledges of our party and particularly of the adoption of the Oregon plan of electing United States senators, makes him a leader among those who believe in restoring the powers of the government to the people."

"We, therefore, with confidence, invite to his support Democrats everywhere to the end that Ohio may not only present his name to the next Democratic national convention, but through her delegates stand and work for his nomination."

County committees throughout the state are following these examples by endorsing the presidential candidacy of Judson Harmon, who, as governor of Ohio, has given an administration that, for efficiency, has never been excelled.

"PUNISH OFFICERS, NOT CORPORATIONS," SAYS HARMON

Jail Sentences of Guilty Men Advocated for Fight on Trusts.

Columbus, O.—(Special).—"In itself, a corporation is neither good nor bad. It is only what its officers make it. There is no use in fighting a corporation and you can't put it in jail. Proper and effective punishment of the men who are really responsible for the wrongdoing would have an immediate and wholesome effect. Guilt is personal and animate."

This is the gist of "an authorized" interview with Governor Harmon of Ohio, which appeared recently in the Outlook magazine, to which ex-President Roosevelt is a contributing member.

Governor Harmon outlined his work as chief magistrate of Ohio and answered a quip of the Gridiron club members, who quoted Harmon as saying: "I am the friend of the masses and the classes are friends of mine." "As for being the friend of the masses," says Governor Harmon, "I hope it is true. I hope it is true, too, of the classes, if there are any classes in this country. I want to be the friend of everyone who is straight and square, and I don't care whether he is a farm laborer or a corporation president. The only fellows I am against are the grafters, and I'm glad to have made some of them squirm. I don't know whether the classes are friends of mine or not. If they are, and think they can get anything out of it they ought not to have, they are fools."

In regard to the initiative and referendum, Harmon said it was still in an experimental stage insofar as Ohio was concerned. He was opposed to the recall.

"We do not have the recall; incompetent and unworthy officials are rare exceptions. The recall of judges by mere vote would, I think, be especially injurious to the administration of justice."

XXVII. CORRECTIONS

WHEN Appelles was exhibiting a beautiful painting a cobbler directed his attention to a fault in the shoe and the master immediately corrected it; the shoemaker then criticised the shaping of the leg and Appelles said, "Shoemaker, stick to your last." The advice of the painter stands as good in government as it does in art, but unfortunately many of our legislators have no last and others insist on legislating the most on things they know the least about. If our legislators would "stick to their last," we would soon have "fewer laws and better laws."

APPELES EXHIBITING A PAINTING.

Let those who aspire to write our laws struggle with their subjects like a soul working out a plan of salvation for the human race; soar in the bright crisp atmosphere of the practical and light on the mountain peaks of progress with the unerring accuracy of an eagle in its flight; rise from the low dusky horizon of suspicion to the star-lit heights of genius and kneeling at the feet of the ruler of the Universe study nature's laws from divine demonstrators. ## Man Coughs and Breaks Rib.

After a frightful coughing spell a man in Neenah Wis., felt terrible pains in his side and his doctor found two ribs had been broken. What agony Dr. King's New Discovery would have saved him. A few teaspoonful ends a late cough, while persistent use routs obstinate coughs, expels stubborn colds or heals weak sore lungs. "I feel sure it's a God send to humanity," writes Mrs. Effie Morton, Columbia, Mo., "for I believe I would have consumption today, if I had not used this remedy." It's guaranteed to satisfy, and you can get a free trial bottle or 50-cent or $1.00 size at W. H. Windrow's.

We don't know much about it of course, but a sportively inclined friend of ours says that it takes a shrewd man to play the game both ways from the middle. Then he says that a certain gentleman of political renown seems to be doing it with considerable success.

Married.
 Wednesday afternoon the hospitable home of Mr. A. H. D. Hurt was converted into a veritable garden, consisting of Cape Jasmines, Magnolias, Carnations and ferns; the occasion being the marriage of his most charming daughter, Miss Leila May, to Mr. Joe Monroe Dunlap of Mission, Texas.

As the guests entered, they were received by Miss Hope Victor of Uvalde, and each registered in the bride's book, then were ushered into the parlor by Misses Bennie Hurt and Cecile Carle.

At the appointed hour Miss Julia Victor of Uvalde, Texas, rendered Lohengrin's wedding march as the bridal party entered. Rev. Moses, pastor of the first Baptist church, performed the ceremony under a large arch made of evergreen and smilax, from the center of which was suspended a bleeding heart.

Mr. W. W. McAnelly, of Devine, acted as best man and Miss Sheila Bryant, of Llano, was bride's maid.

After the ceremony, the guests were ushered into the diningroom which was tastefully decorated for the occasion. In the center stood the punch bowl in a beautiful lake banked in by Cape Jasmine and ferns. Misses Hope Victor of Uvalde and Cecile Carle presided at the punch bowl, while Misses Evelyn de Montel and Goldie Hurt served cake.

The bride was handsomely gowned in hand embroidered satin, trimmed in shadow and eluny lace, made in tunic effect, draped in white silk fringe. She carried an arm bouquet of white carnations and ferns, and wore a delicate wreath of orange blossoms in her hair. The bridesmaid's dress was of white marquisette over satin. Miss Victor was handsomely gowned in pink marquisette over messaline, adorned in crystal trimmings. The gentlemen all wore conventional black.

The out of town guests were: Mrs. W. C. Roberts and babe, of Lytle, Texas, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Stevenson and children, of Eagle Pass, Mrs. Jack Moore and daughter, Miss Ethel, of Kerrville, Mrs. Hugh Love and babe of Devine, Misses Julia and Hope Victor and Mr. Deeds Cardwell of Uvalde, Miss Shiela Bryant of Llano and Mr. W. W. McAnelly of Devine.

Miss Leila May is the third daughter of Mr. Hurt and is loved and admired by all who know her.

Mr. Dunlap is postmaster at Mission, Texas, and is an enterprising and industrious young man.

They were the recipients of many handsome and valuable presents.

The bride's going-away gown was of tan silk pongee, trimmed in ecru lace and Copenhagen blue, with accessories to match.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap left on the evening train amid showers of rice and happy good wishes. After a short bridal trip they will be at home in Mission.

Albert Pichot and F. H. Schweers went to San Antonio yesterday on business. Mr. Pichot expected to buy a new molasses mill to make up his fine crop of cane that is just now maturing.

Do You Like Coffee?
 Do you like tea, cocoa, and Coca-Cola? Do you know what it is in these beverages that make them so refreshing—that helps you so nicely over the rough spots of the day? Scientists tell us that it is the caffeine which they contain.
 As a learned Chinese said of it more than two thousand years ago:
 "It tempers the spirit and harmonizes the mind;
 Disperses lassitude and relieves fatigue;
 Awakes thought and prevents drowsiness;
 Enlivens or refreshes the body and clears the perceptive faculties."
 In all nations at all times the caffeine containing beverages have been highly valued for their refreshing qualities. What ginger is to the ginger cake, caffeine is to coffee, tea, cocoa, and Coca-Cola. Coffee without caffeine would not be coffee. Tea without caffeine would not be tea. Coca-Cola without caffeine would not be Coca-Cola. You would get no benefit from them.
 They would be flat, stale and unprofitable.
 The old saying of caffeine is "to cheer and not to inebriate." In fact caffeine, according to medical authorities, is the only true or natural stimulant, because it is the only stimulant which does not call for ever increasing quantities and the only one whose regular use does not produce disease of mind or body. Caffeine is the only stimulant that is not only absolutely harmless but positively beneficial to health.

Calomel Sometimes Causes Salivation.

Dodson's Liver-Tone Has All the Medicinal Properties of Calomel With None of the Dangerous After-Effects.

You can get along without taking calomel yourself or giving it to your family when you can buy a substitute for it as good as Dodson's Liver-Tone. Dodson's Liver-Tone is a pure, harmless vegetable liquid that starts the liver to action just as surely as calomel does. But, unlike calomel, Dodson's Liver-Tone does not stimulate the liver too much. It cures constipation gently instead of making you more bilious than you were at first, and it can no more salivate you than a teaspoonful of maple syrup can salivate you.

Dodson's Liver-Tone has given such perfect satisfaction to every person to whom W. H. Windrow has sold a bottle that this store will give the money back to any person who buys a bottle and does not find it a perfect substitute for calomel. It is worth something to you to try a medicine with a guarantee like that.
